I would ask the FCC to deny the NAB's request. We live in a free-market, democratic society, which means, to me, that any business that's following the rules, complying with the law, and offering the best service - as XM does - should be allowed to compete in the marketplace. If the NAB's bankrollers can help commercial AM/FM stations improve their service, then the consumers can win by having even more choice....which, of course, is what living in a free country is supposed to be about....choice.
Thank you.
